Dear Keith,

I am excited to participate in your project "Those on the Front lines of Cancer".

Despite major advances over the past thirty years, cancer remains the leading cause of death from disease of American children. As a childhood cancer survivor, I can personally attest to the importance of sharing the stories of individuals afflicted by cancer, their caregivers and the medical personnel treating them.

At Children's Hospital of Michigan, we diagnose and treat cancer in children, teenagers and young adults who come from a wide range of different backgrounds in our community. Our team of specially trained physicians, nurses, social workers, pharmacists, childlife specialists and other support staff have one purpose and focus dedicated to healing patients. Not only finding new and more effective treatments is of paramount importance, trying to identify the causes of cancer including the potential role of environmental exposures, can potentially lead to early detection or even prevent cancer in the future.

I look forward to working with you on this important endeavor. Thank you for raising awareness of this disease which impacts a large proportion of people in society at some point during their lives.

Best regards,
